Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fujita et al., U.S. patent No. 5,880,150 in view of Kunze et al., U.S. patent No. 5,230,867.

Fujita et al., teaches the known and expected use of a packaged antimicrobial agent within a refrigerator system, particularly with fresh produce containment, to prevent the onslaught of bacteria that would be detrimental to maintaining freshness and viability thereof. Fujita et al., teach the know use of an AIT vapor, and that such vapors have strong, unpleasant odors that can be residual in the food if delivery is not controlled. See column 1, lines 25-30; column 7, lines 20-28 and column 7, line 54 through column 8, line 5.

Kunze et al., teach a packaging system for controlled-release delivery of treating vapors wherein the agent is encapsulated in a permeable sleeve means, which is then contained in container having a porous/permeable top, that top being covered at a location spaced therefrom, by a peelable impermeable cover means. The container is placed in the area to be treated, the cover peeled off and the vapor diffuses to the surrounding area at a controlled rate. Kunze et al., teaches controlled release of aromatics.

It would have been well within the purview of one of ordinary skill in the art to contain the antimicrobial means of Fujita et al., within a system such as taught in Kunze et al., with the inclusion of an aromatic as well, because it would provide for the effective controlled release of the antimicrobial to optimize shelf life within a refrigerator while simultaneously counteracting any unpleasant odor that may accompany the antimicrobial activity.

With respect to claim 4, Fujita et al., teach the addition of a resin to the antimicrobial formulation.

With respect to claims 8 and 9, Kunze et al., clearly teach an aromatic of the herbal type (see column 5, lines 9-15) and it would have been well within the purview of one of ordinary skill in the art to choose a citrus type as well, because of it's known and expected compliment to food uses.
